

PRESS RELEASE

The Acropolis Museum honors the anniversary of the 1900 years since the ascent to the throne of Emperor Hadrian, a friend and benefactor of Athens, with the presentation of an exquisite portrait of the Emperor found in Syngrou Avenue, and an interesting video, produced by the Museum, which showcases the Emperor's immense building program concerning the city of Athens in the 2nd cent. AD. Hadrian's work signifies the revival of Greek Letters and Science during the time of the Roman Empire.

The simple yet impressive presentation will be on display at the Museum ground floor from 15.1.2017 until 31.3.2017, daily during Museum opening times, with free admission to visitors.
